OVERVIEW

Bron Taylor is Professor of Religion and Nature at The University of Florida. He is also a Fellow of the Rachel Carson Center (at Ludwig-Maximilians-Universität, Munchen), and a Senior Research Scholar at the Leibniz-Institut für Europäische Geschichte (at University of Mainz, Germany). As an interdisciplinary environmental studies scholar, and trained in ethics, religious studies, and social scientific approaches to understanding human culture, his scholarly work engages the quest for environmentally sustainable societies. An academic entrepreneur and program builder, he led the initiative to create an academic major in Environmental Studies at the University of Wisconsin Oshkosh, later initiated and was elected president of the International Society for the Study of Religion, Nature and Culture, while also founding its affiliated journal and becoming its editor. Appointed as the Samuel S. Hill Ethics Professor at the University of Florida in 2002, he played a leading role in constructing the world's first Ph.D. program with an emphasis in Religion and Nature.
